PUTTING IT TOGETHER

The aspects of our life at Fenwick fit together like the pieces of a jigsaw puzzle, coming together to form a unique whole. In assembling a jigsaw puzzle, one might find pieces and shapes that do not appear to fit anywhere. However, in the end, every piece fits neatly to form a complete, perfect design. The process may be frustrating and baffling at times, but the final fitting together is a satisfying and rewarding experience. So it is with our years at Bishop Fenwick High School. We all try to find our individual places in the larger picture. In our attempts we are guided and aided by the Fenwick spirit.

There is a special spirit at Fenwick — togetherness. It is evident in the way we come together in class, at Mass and assemblies, on sports teams, in the student government, at the spring musical, at dances, on class trips, and in other after-school activities. The 38 different communities in which we live come together on this campus to form the Fenwick family in which we work, learn, pray, love and support one another. The Fenwick spirit supports the Fenwick community and makes each individual part of the whole. This is how we are Putting it Together.

Spiritually Coming Together — UNDERSTANDING THE PUZZLE

Because it is a Catholic school, religion is an essential part of Fenwick traditions. In religion classes, in morning prayer, and in community outreaches, we come together in the true Christian spirit of love.

All students are required to take four years of religion classes. However, the classes are varied so as to provide an interesting religious education. The freshman and sophomore classes focus on fundamentals, providing a foundation for the junior and senior classes which expand the students' knowledge of one aspect of spiritual development, such as marriage or dealing with death.

Morning prayer helps all students to prepare to start the day in a positive manner. This positive attitude extends into our masses which are planned by students and teachers. Together, they participate by praying, singing hymns, doing the readings, and administering the Eucharist.

An extension of our spiritual life at Fenwick is the way we reach out to others through such projects as the Thanksgiving Food Drive, in which students and faculty contribute canned food to the needy. Another community service project is Operation Charlie, a well established Fenwick Christmas tradition in which seniors are matched with residents of an orphanage in Rochester, New Hampshire. Finally, in the Walk for Hunger, Fenwick students and teachers join with other concerned people from the Boston area to raise money for Boston's charitable organizations by walking twenty miles around Boston Common.

These are the ways in which the essential piece of religion fits into our lives.

Academics — A PERFECT FIT

Although there are other important aspects of our life at Bishop Fenwick, such as our excellent sports program and extracurricular activities, academics is the most important part of our time here, especially because Fenwick is a college preparatory school.

One of the reasons that Fenwick succeeds in its mission, with over ninety percent of its graduates attending college, is our superb teachers. They are not only excellent instructors in their subjects but make learning fun, as well. Remember Mrs. Patch's "Patch's Court," a takeoff of the popular TV program "The People's Court," which helped us critique our classmates' oral reports? What about Mr. Kawczynski's wild field trips? Or Ms. Sullivan's Bible Trivia game and Mr. Hillner's Bio-Ball? Our faculty's innovative spirit makes classwork exciting and learning an adventure.

Another reason such a large percentage of Fenwick's students proceed to college is the great number of available courses. Required courses, such as English, provide the fundamentals, while electives, such as studio art and journalism, allow us the opportunity to dabble in another field or learn special skills needed for college.

Innovative and inspiring teachers, a well-balanced curriculum, and enthusiastic students combine to provide each individual with a perfect fit.

Leadership Program — A NEW PIECE OF THE PUZZLE

A new piece of the Fenwick puzzle was put in place this summer with the introduction of the Leadership Program. The Leadership Program was developed to be an annual summer activity for selected Fenwick students. Fr. Peter Walker, a founder of the program, defines it as having both theoretical and personal purposes. Theoretically, the program is devised to help develop leadership within students. The students concentrate on their leadership and communication skills as well as on problem solving techniques. They also learn how to run meetings and recruit new members.

In a personal sense, the program causes the students to examine what they bring to the school community and to apply what they learn to activities, clubs, and a variety of events that occur during the school year. This summer the first session was held at High Folly retreat in the woods of western Massachusetts. There the participants took part in gripe sessions and informal conversations between newly-made friends. The community of Fenwick sophomores, juniors, and seniors cooked and cleaned together. However, the Leadership Program was not all work and the students were able to relax, swim, and play volleyball.

This program is helping to develop the students of today into the leaders of tomorrow who will help us in "putting it together."

Clockwise: Good advice. Mr. Farley advises Shane McCarthy, vice president of the senior class. — Developing. Student leaders are given instructions for Development Night. — On his way. Fr. Peter Walker prepares to leave for High Folly. — Sports leaders. Mark Cicoria, Robert Peachey and James Reed discuss their duties as captains.

Clockwise: Ready and waiting. Christine Louf and Elizabeth Almeida wait for the seminar to begin. — Working hard. Matthew Marnik, Dennis Cormier, Fr. Peter and Mrs. Murdock unwind. — Number one and two. Senior class Vice-President Shane McCarthy and President Karen Harney express admiration for the Red Sox's winning season. — Pitching in. Deborah Caron takes her turn in the kitchen.

"And we're just another piece of the puzzle,
How one life touches the other,

Just another part of the plan.
is so hard to understand."

— Survivor

Morning Time — COMING TOGETHER

Before 8 a.m. every school day, over 900 students arrive at Bishop Fenwick High School. We come by bus, car, motorbike, bicycle, and on foot. Some of us arrive well-organized and early while others barely make it into homeroom in time for the morning prayer.

Do you remember your freshman year, rushing out the door to meet the bus, breakfast in one hand, lunch in the other? Even worse were the days when the bus came late, or didn't come at all. Remember when the bus broke down, and you had to wait without heat in cramped conditions until the company could send another bus for you?

As sophomores and juniors we graduated to carpools and a different set of problems. Do you recall how furious you were when you were forced to serve a detention for your homeroom teacher because your carpool was 10 minutes late? Then there were the days when a member of your carpool invited a friend to spend the night and you all had to cram yet another person into the back seat. All squished together with our book bags on our knees, we wondered if it was really worth the trouble to get to school.

As seniors we have gone beyond all that. Now we have our own cars, and maybe even our own carpools, with underclassmen as paying passengers. We still have problems, such as trying to make a left turn from Margin street into the circle. Hurrying to school in order to find a parking space is another. But it sure beats buses and carpools — after all, now we have control of the radio!

Clockwise: The Bermuda way. Bret DeBenedetto arrives in style. — The family wagon. Jennifer Erb and Kyle Archibald are dropped off in front of the school. — Parking in rear. Bill Himaris looks pleased with himself after securing one of Fenwick's few parking spaces. — Public transportation. Nicole Abrams can't wait to get to class.

Clockwise: The Gloucester group. Roselle Randazza, Suzanne Lamb and Kristen Dombrowski are happy to arrive after a long ride. — Good friends. Karen Ieradi, Mary Ellen Maguire and Carolyn Keenan get to school together bright and early. — All in one car? Dennis Cormier leads the parade down the parking lot. — Carpool. Steven Berube, Antonio Craveiro and Lori Soucy unload their gear. — Trick or treat. Dawn Riley and Sabina Cox prepare for Halloween night. — You've got a friend. Jennifer Hagerman shares her pet pal with Sarah Devlin.

Practice Time — PART OF THE TEAM

As in many other aspects of our school, Bishop Fenwick has a tradition of excellence in its renowned sports program. For four of the past five years, we have been honored in receiving the Boston Globe's Nason Award for overall achievement in sports. This accomplishment is due largely to the cooperation between and dedication of both team members and coaches. Although all of the teams played well in 1986, several which stood out were the undefeated swim and girls' cross country teams, the girls' basketball and softball teams as well as the track, volleyball, and field hockey teams. The members of these teams worked hard and devoted much of their free time training for a successful season. The same enthusiasm and dedication is evident in this year's teams as they prepare for their games and meets.

Even before school starts, Fenwick athletes begin training for the fall season. Winter sports as well as fall sports start preparing their players in early September, an example of the dedication that Fenwick athletes possess. These late summer training sessions which begin in August, continue into autumn. Most afternoons throughout the school year, the fields behind the school are filled with individuals pushing themselves to help their teams achieve their goals.

Clockwise: No pain, no gain. Matthew Sullivan looks on as Tom McMillan cools down after practice. — Heading for the showers. Peter Manning and Todd LaPore leave the field with their gear. — Pleased with their performance. Fred Walsh, John Mahoney and Bruce Bourassa congratulate each other. — Football fatigue. Robert Anderson takes a break.

Clockwise: Lacing up. Katia Hale prepares for practice. — Whet goes up . . . Kristen Palucci waits for the ball. — Practice makes perfect. Laura Galopin and Shonali Rajani perfect their skills. — Reedy for the game. Michael Holland and Christopher McHugh feel sure of victory. — Field Hockey. Shannon Geaney leads her teammates in defense.

Activities — FITTING IN

Almost every student at Fenwick finds a place in which to fit. Through our various activities and clubs it is easy to be a part of the school. There is something for everyone, from the Chess Club, the Math Club, and the Science League to the Band and Scuba Club. The diversity of our activities reflects the wide array of interests that Fenwick students have. Even those who don't belong to the clubs find their place in other activities. The Social Committee organizes school dances, class trips such as mountain climbing and ski trips, and other popular events. All students can read the school newspaper and the magazine sponsored by the Cultural Committee, or they can go on a retreat planned by the Campus Ministry. The annual spring musical always attracts a large number of students thanks to the hard work of the Drama Club.

Clockwise: My Fair Lady. Joseph Surette leads other members of the cast in getting Mr. Doolittle to the church on time. — Open house. Maureen Haggerty, Meghan Johnson and Johanna Boyle demonstrate how to make Japanese characters. — In a world of his own. James Pappas prepares for the Christmas concert. — Checkmate. Marc Colcord and Jolene Parrelli concentrate on their game.

For students who want to be more directly involved there is the Student Government which leads school activities and branches off into committees such as the Cultural, the Religious, the Social, and the Athletic Committees. Other pursuits in which students may become directly involved are the Peer Education program, which is designed to help fellow students with decision making, and the National Honor Society, which tutors students in academics and supports Student Government activities, such as the Open House.

Together these various activities interlock and become part of the Fenwick puzzle.

Christmas belles. Susan Foley and Kristen Jones obviously enjoy the Cotillion. Serious performers. Christopher Jarznka and James Papes make beautiful music. "They could have danced all night." The cast of My Fair Lady prepares to perform. Sophomore spirit. Spartanbusters dominated the Spirit Week pep rally.

Special Pieces

Bishop Fenwick is a school with a unique blend of students. Individual students with their individual talents come together to form a diverse yet united student body. These following students are only a sampling of the many special and talented members of the Class of 1987. They are being recognized for their achievements in their respective sports and activities. We wish them the best of luck in their future endeavors and hope they continue to strive for success.

"Even though skating has taken up a large part of my life, it has all been worth it and I would feel lost without it," states Tracey Bowker who is presently ranked as a United States Gold Medalist in freestyle. Tracey, who skates after school for three or four hours a day and often before school, has been a competitive figure skater and performer for the past seven years. She is a member of the North Shore Skating Club and represents the club in statewide competition. In addition, she is a member of the "Flashing Blades" precision team which qualified for the Eastern Championship. Tracey also enjoyed performing as a soloist in the past five shows put on by her club.

As a result of her hard work, dedication and talent, she has won twenty-three gold, silver, and bronze medals in competition. Last summer Tracy represented the North Shore Skating Club at the Lake Placid International where she won the Junior Ladies Division 1 Freestyle Competition. She plans to continue skating in college, turn professional and teach. She already knows that she will enjoy teaching because of the work she does every Saturday morning with young skaters. Tracey works hard but obviously thrives on it because she is doing something that she loves.

A year and a half ago Bishop Fenwick welcomed Norimichi Kubota from Tokyo, Japan. After graduating with the class of 1987, Norimichi plans to attend college in the United States and then possibly return to Japan.

Norimichi is a member of both the track and baseball teams. He notes that he participated in these sports in Japan and thoroughly enjoys them anywhere.

While missing the familiarity of his native country, Norimichi has come to appreciate several aspects of American life, including the educational process in American schools. Compared to Japanese schools, they are much freer with more free time and independent study. Another advantage to life in the United States is the driving age which is sixteen here, but eighteen in Japan. Since Norimichi was able to get his license at an earlier age, he appreciates this difference.

Norimichi misses his friends in Japan and he finds the English language difficult to master at times. These two problems are being solved since several of his Fenwick friends help him with his English. Norimichi enjoys life in America and although he would love to go back to Japan, he plans to stay here for a while longer.

Kristen Woods' life revolves around swimming and has done so since she was six years old and first began to compete in organized swim meets. In addition to captaining the Bishop Fenwick Swim Team, Kristen also swims all year with the Cape Ann YMCA Swim Team; for both of these she is the MVP. She dedicates about twenty hours a week to practices and meets.

Her hard work has resulted in five years of competition in the Nationals in Florida. Other swim meets have taken her throughout New England, to Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Canada. Kristen's best events include the backstroke and individual medley, for which she holds the school record, and the freestyle. In the former event she is ranked in the top ten New England swimmers. This ranking is determined by averaging her times in this event in competitions. Kristen plans to continue swimming throughout college and possibly coach or train swimmers in the future.

Since the age of seven, Jeffrey Russell has been playing tennis, a game he became interested in through his parents. Encouraged to play at an early age, he has developed a growing expertise in the sport.

Jeff dedicates an average of thirteen hours a week to his tennis. His dedication has paid off in that he has played in various New England tennis tournaments, traveling to New Hampshire, Connecticut and Rhode Island for competitions. Recently he finished third in a tournament in Westford, Massachusetts and fourth in a New Hampshire tournament. Jeff is currently ranked twelfth in New England.

Thinking ahead, Jeff plans to continue playing tennis in college and plans to pursue tennis as far as it will take him.

"The spoken word is but a temporary emotion — the written word is a lasting impression." Kathleen Fitzgerald certainly lives up to her motto. On the Lancelette staff since sophomore year, Kathleen now serves as Editor-in chief. She has established herself as a non-salaried journalist in her hometown, writing for the North Reading Transcript. Kathleen performs this service for the North Reading Soccer League, whose games are her major beat.

As a dual citizen of Ireland and the United States, she displays her interest in her heritage in Irish step-dancing. In 1983 she performed at Symphony Hall with twenty other stepdancers from Boston.

Kathleen takes an avid interest in political science and English, and will further her education at Wellesley College.

A Day for Buddies

Sharing the Christmas Spirit

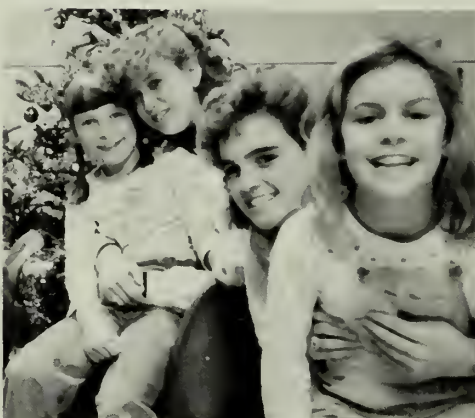

Following a popular Fenwick tradition, forty seniors spent a December day at St. Charles' Orphanage in Rochester, New Hampshire. This annual Christmas event is fondly known as Operation Charlie.

Arriving at the orphanage with their senior homeroom teachers and arm loads of presents, the students quickly made friends with the children. After dinner, Santa Claus, a.k.a. Frederick Walsh, gave out gifts to the eager children, and everyone had a chance to enjoy the new toys. However, the good times had to end. After a sad farewell, the Fenwick students returned home with the hope of another visit in the spring!

Administration

Principal

All of the finest things we have today were discovered, fashioned, or conceived by those who kept constantly in sight the motto, "I may be wrong." — Heywood Broun

Four years is such a short time in your lifetime but they feel like forever when you are in high school. As graduation approaches there are faces mixed with sadness and joy. Sadness at the end of an era and joy and anticipation at the beginning of another. One of the objectives of education is to prepare the young to educate themselves throughout their lives and it is our hope that your four years at Bishop Fenwick have helped you to do just that. We send you into the world filled not only with information and skills but with values. We have tried to help you develop a capacity to reason, to imagine and to judge for yourselves. For it is such a capacity that will be stretched and tested by the world you face.

In the years to come you may not remember any of the geometric proofs, French vocabulary words, or how many pink slips you received but the person you are will have been affected by your encounters with teachers, administrators, and other students here at Fenwick. May you go now and in 20 years come back to Fenwick bearing the gifts and fruits of a lifetime.

When we look back at our high school years and reflect on how we spent our time, what is most significant? Is it the hours spent in study and academics, or the friendships developed during free time? In the long run, they are equally important.

"Alas for those who never sing. But die with their music still in them."

Supervisor of Scheduling

Athletic Director

The Administrative Faculty is instrumental in planning and executing school policy and in defining the rules and regulations of the school. Sr. Charlotte Kane, the Supervisor of Curriculum, helps the various departments improve their course offerings by developing new courses and by improving the present courses. Sr. Caroline Julie, Supervisor of Scheduling, is in charge of scheduling courses during the summer and in resolving any schedule problems that arise. Sr. Margaret Melville, as Guidance Director, supervises the activities of that department as well as serving as the school's college advisor. Mr. James McHugh, the Athletic Director, supervises all athletic activities at Fenwick. These four people are each essential to the smooth running of the school and are constantly working to promote the well-being of students.

Development

According to Mr. Ralph LeDuc, the Fenwick Development Program has been organized to "address several immediate and long-range needs which are key to preserving and enhancing the reputation of the school." The program is intended as an alternate source of income to meet those needs, by means of financial support from alumni and their parents, from the North Shore business community, and from parents of students. Through the Development Program, short-term needs such as renovation of the science laboratories, renovation of the auditorium/gymnasium complex, and the formation of an endowment fund, and long-term needs such as the construction of an outdoor track and tennis courts, will be satisfied.

Ms. Kathy Driscoll, the director of the Development Program and Alumni Affairs, is in charge of getting the program off the ground and generating support for the program. She, along with the staff, Board of Directors, and Advisory Board of the Development Program, has designed a list of opportunities for giving and a gift payment schedule to better encourage contributions. Ms. Driscoll can be found in her office in the Julie Billiard Wing, diligently working to further the well-being of the school.

The office secretaries, Mrs. Eileen Labrecque and Mrs. Cheryl Devereux, the school nurse, Mrs. Mary Ann Howard, the Library Assistant, Mrs. Gina Jaworski, the Guidance secretaries, Mrs. Mary O'Hare and Mrs. Pauline LaRoche, and the school Business Manager, Mrs. Maria Sullivan, are available whenever students need their assistance. They always respond cheerfully and are forever patient and helpful. These women are a very important, if not recognized, part of the school, and we all rely on their kindness.

A Helpful Team

Dear Seniors,

I am writing this while proctoring a sophomore math exam the day after the big January blizzard, the one we thought would shut Fenwick down, but didn't. The month of May, senior week, and graduation seem still a long way off. . . It's really not. It's less than four months from the time I'm writing this, and it'll be here quite soon. Isn't that the way time is? We think we have plenty of it, but all of a sudden we realize that we don't. At the beginning of our freshman year, 1987 and your graduation seemed light years away, but here it is, and as Huey Lewis would say, "This is it!"

My message to you as you leave Fenwick is brief and simple. Time is a gift to you from God. It is yours. You can waste it or use it well. None of us knows how much time we'll have here on earth, and so my prayer for you is that God will show you how to use the time of your life wisely and well.

All I can say is "Praise the Lord" for the joy and privilege of having known you the past four years. Any time I can be of service, please let me know. As we all face the unknown future, let us remember Jesus' words in the familiar song: "Be not afraid, I go before you always. Come follow me, and I will give you rest." Peace, God bless, Thank you. You will always be in my thoughts and prayers.

The Campus Ministry, now in its second year, works to promote the spiritual development of the school through outreach programs and through programs involving the Religion Department and the Religion Committee. Campus Ministry plans days of recollection for freshmen and sophomores and overnight retreats for juniors and seniors at Fenwick. In addition, it helps plan liturgies and offers personal counseling and programs for faculty and for parents.

Mrs. Kathleen Murdock, Fr. Peter Walker, Fr. James Nyhan, and Sr. Marie McDonald run the Campus Ministry and work to develop new programs as the need arises. The idea of Campus Ministry is that "ministry can be done more effectively as a team, rather than by a single person," according to Mrs. Murdock. The people involved in Campus Ministry aim to respond to the changing needs of the community and the program will grow as they find new ways to answer the needs of the students and faculty.

"Libraries Are Not Made; They Grow"—Augustine Birrell

Bro. Frederick Codair, CFX
Librarian

Grammatici certant et adhuc sub iudice lis est. — Horace (Ars Poetica, 78)

The above quote expresses the true essence of the O'Rourke Library. The one room in Bishop Fenwick which seems to have grown more than any other place in the school is the library. It was started in one room over the school driveway by the O'Rourke sisters, Sr. Madeleine Louise and Sr. Julianne, for whom the library is named. The library has since spread to other rooms and even uses the corridor. Where there were once desks, now stand shelves of books.

When Br. Fred Codair came to Bishop Fenwick in 1980, the library consisted of the one room which is now the reference room. With the help of Mr. Ralph LeDuc and Sr. Nancy O'Reilly, who arrived in 1981, he was able to organize the books which were located in the one room, and the library has progressed to the point where it is now.

Now the library occupies an entire section of the third floor and includes magazines, newspapers, computers, and typewriters, a microfilm machine, and an impressive array of reference books, in addition to the stacks of fiction and non-fiction. Since its founding in 1959, the O'Rourke Library has grown from a room full of books to a place where students can study quietly, do research, take a course in study skills, type a paper, read for pleasure, or just relax.

Speak Up! Mr. Jaworski counsels a member of the student body.

The Guidance Department, led by the dynamic Sr. Margaret Melville, is a definite asset for all Fenwick students. Mr. Carl Sacco, Sr. Brigid Devlin, Mr. John Jaworski, and the other counselors get to know students from appointments made to speak individually with every student during the year. The counselors are always willing to help with course selection and to listen to problems, personal or scholastic.

When students reach the junior year, Mrs. Constance Skahan introduces them to the challenge of college selection. She emphasizes the importance of that year and encourages students to do their very best. Senior year, Sr. Margaret Melville takes over. She discusses college and career choices with the seniors and speaks with senior parents about selecting schools and financial aid. She also has the tremendous responsibility of writing many recommendations to accompany college applications within a short span of time. Fortunately she has Mrs. Mary O'Hare and Mrs. Pauline LaRoche, the Guidance secretaries, who help her keep the process running smoothly and efficiently.

The counselors at Fenwick not only show the students how to get more out of school, they also show them how to get more out of life. Thanks for four years of guidance and friendship.

English

After four years of English at Fenwick, a student will have good writing skills and an appreciation for and enjoyment of literature. Department head Mrs. Nancy Wilcox notes that, "our emphasis for the past four years has been writing," and as a result, Fenwick graduates find themselves well prepared for college. The department emphasizes language arts during the freshman year and a writing workshop during the sophomore year so that students will have a good background for writing; during the junior and senior years there is a greater emphasis on literature, both American and British, as well as on critical and research papers.

The main goal of the English department this year is preparation for an Advanced Placement level, which will start next year. Members of the department have been attending workshops, gathering information and looking at other schools in order to plan the course which will be a study of world literature designed for self-disciplined and motivated students.

As in other years, the English department is offering a number of elective courses, including journalism, creative writing and expository composition, which are intended to provide a chance for students to study specific types of writing.

The main goal of the Social Studies Department is that through their studies, young men and women will develop a balanced view of the world, an understanding of basic economic, political and social factors which have influenced the development of this country, and a questioning attitude. Although only two credits in Social Studies are necessary for graduation, United States History, a requirement for all juniors, is considered the most important course offered by the department, since it is intended to give students a clear view of the history of their country and its government.

The strength of the Social Studies Department, according to chairman Edward Kawczynski, is the dedication of its faculty to the objectives of the department. The teachers spend a great deal of time to assure that these goals are met, and what makes the faculty dynamic is the different approaches the individual teachers take to meet them. Sr. Judith Nee leads the Close-Up trip to Washington to give U.S. History students an understanding of the federal government. Mr. Kawczynski's students are treated to a traditional Chinese dinner, and Mr. Tierney uses his dramatic skills to reenact memorable events in World History classes.

European Culture, Asian and African Studies, Governments and World Issues, and Psychology and Sociology offer Fenwick students the opportunity to learn more about their own culture and the culture of others. This year, the Social Studies Department is working to improve such courses and to prepare a new addition, Advanced Placement United States History.

Ms. Celeste Trifero

It is truly a pleasure to speak with people from a foreign nation and understand what they are saying. The language department, under the guidance of Ms. Diane Colozzi, is bringing Bishop Fenwick closer to that pleasure.

The language department offers four course levels in French, Spanish and Latin. Spanish, which draws the largest number of students, has added an Advanced Placement course this year. It consists of a select group of gifted seniors who have already taken four years of Spanish and who intend to continue their study in college. The number of French students seems to be increasing and Latin remains an important and popular language.

The enjoyment of speaking another language is summed up in this anonymous quotation submitted by Mrs. Arlene Cormier. "Languages are fluffy big pillows stuffed between nations — what others say is muffled and nearly lost in them, and when we speak their grammar, we get feathers in our mouth. It's worth it. What a pleasure to phrase an idea, even in child's words, slowly, and sail it across the gulf in another language to a different speaking human being."

Mathematics

In today's world of high technology, a wider understanding of mathematics is required. Bishop Fenwick High School prepares its students to meet this challenge with courses ranging from algebra and geometry to analysis. The focus is not solely on these types of math, but also on business mathematics such as accounting. Says Sr. Joseph Leo, head of the Mathematics Department, "I feel that Bishop Fenwick has a strong math program which allows each student to be well-prepared for the future. However, I also feel that it depends on the individual whether he or she makes the best use of the program."

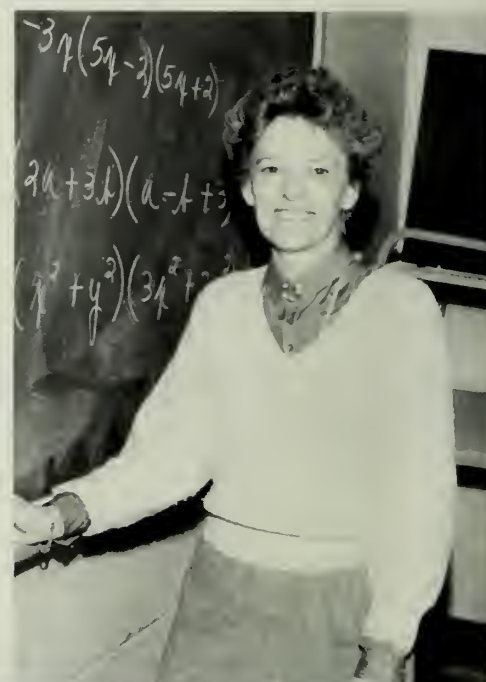

"Math SAT scores have been steadily increasing, and Fenwick is now above the national average," says Sr. Margaret Melville. The benefit of Fenwick training pays off not only in College Board scores, but it also broadens the scope of careers for students. Computers and information systems, fairly new fields, are careers that require math. Other math oriented courses of study in college include medicine, engineering, business and architecture. With a firm foundation in math from Fenwick, students who choose these courses of study in college will find themselves bound for success.

Science

According to Mrs. Ernestine Perrin, head of the Science Department the aim of the study of science in high school is to make the student "more aware of how important science is in daily life, because we live in a technological society." As a result of their science courses, she hopes that students will become well-informed citizens and will get involved in current issues in which science will affect their daily lives.

To prepare students for this, the Science Department offers a traditional curriculum, including biology, anatomy and physiology, chemistry, physics, and principles of chemistry and physics. In the future, says Mrs. Perrin, the department wants to expand its offerings to include geology and marine biology and to encourage students to take more science courses in order to expand their awareness. Next year, according to the Development Committee plan a new chemistry lab will be built; this will update the present lab and provide a new arrangement, satisfying the department's concern for safety and modernization. After the lab is completed, the Science Department will be able to offer Advanced Placement Chemistry.

The Science Department foresees significant developments and changes in the future.

"The Religion Department is concerned with the intellectual growth of the students, but also cares deeply how beliefs are brought into action," says Fr. Peter Walker. Changes have been made in the curriculum from freshman to senior courses to better integrate religion into every aspect of the students' lives.

In freshman and sophomore courses a greater emphasis has been placed on studying The Bible. As freshmen, the students learn about the Old Testament, Christian sacraments, and customs. As sophomores, they study the New Testament and Christ's many messages such as, "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you" and "Love your neighbor as yourself." These words can be used as a moral and spiritual guide.

A variety of courses are offered to juniors and seniors who can further study religious customs in courses such as Religions of the World, Theology of Death and Dying, and Marriage. They can also look back at the tragedy of the Holocaust in Facing History. Other opportunities are offered to study and experience religion in courses such as Apostolic Service and Proclaiming the Good News which allow students to apply the material they learned during their first two years at Fenwick. In Apostolic Service, students can spend time with people who really need their attention and love in nursing homes, hospitals and daycare centers. They can also teach what they have learned to grade school CCD classes in Proclaiming the Good News.

From start to finish the Religion Department prepares Fenwick students to be moral and spiritual young adults who love one another as Christ loves them.

Physical Education

Another important educational function at Fenwick is the role the school takes in developing the student physically as well as intellectually. The Physical Education Department, headed by Ms. Ellen McGrail, offers a mandatory full year course to the freshman and sophomore classes. For freshmen, the program is entitled Health and Physical Education. For three quarters the class participates in team sports, such as basketball, field hockey, and soccer. Later, a quarter is devoted to issues such as drug and alcohol abuse, nutrition and CPR. Sophomores have a choice of a similar program or of a course entitled Project Adventure/New Games. The latter offers the student a variety of trust activities and boasts the slogan, "Play hard, play fair, and no one hurts."

Overall, the Physical Education Department at Bishop Fenwick provides its students with a varied and enriching array of activities. Concludes Ms. McGrail, "The program enables Fenwick students to develop an increased joy in their physical selves and in being with others."

The Business Department, led by Mrs. Beth Chase and including Mr. Anthony Juliano and Mr. William Munroe, is helping students learn skills which are useful both in school and in the workplace. Computer classes and access to the computer room encourage Fenwick students to learn about computers; this knowledge will help them greatly when they continue their education and when entering the working world. Typing classes teach another essential skill, while accounting allows students to investigate an important aspect of business. Through the courses it offers, the Business Department provides a service to the school and prepares students for their future.

Art

In the three years since department head Sr. Mary McLaughlin arrived, the Art Department has been steadily growing. The courses offered this year are Introduction to Art, for freshman, Drawing and Painting, Ceramics, Printmaking 1 and 11, Advanced Art, an independent course for the students wishing to develop their personal portfolios for college. Next year the Art Department will add "courses for the serious student" says Sr. Mary McLaughlin. These will include Studio Art, Composition and Design, and General Art offered to grades ten through twelve.

As with every subject, there are several outstanding students in this area. "Fenwick offers a large variety of classes to talented students. The classes bring out talents the students themselves did not realize they had," says Sr. McLaughlin. One such student is Tricia Santry, a junior who received two gold keys from The Boston Globe for her talent in art. In addition the Art Department is proud to acknowledge Paul Specht, Joanne Andrews, Kristie Bernard, Katia Hale, Ann Marie Fonzo, Susan McGowan, Laura Weil, Shannon Fletcher and Jeanine Stella, who received scholarships to Montserrat School of Art this year.

The Art Department works to help its students discover latent talents and to develop these talents until they reach their potential. Clearly this goal is being accomplished.

Music

Department Head

The Bishop Fenwick Music Department was introduced four years ago by Mr. Jeffrey Patch and has since then undergone several changes and improvements. One reason its popularity is steadily growing is the variety of courses offered. These include beginning instruction in flute, clarinet, and saxophone, chorus and concert choir, and Music Theory I and II. Mr. Patch is encouraged by the number of students in his department and hopes that the trend will continue.

The school is proud to have some outstanding students who have journeyed beyond the Bishop Fenwick Music Department. Four gifted students, Christopher Jarzynka, James Pappas, Heidi O'Connell and Michelle Konevich auditioned for the district band and district chorus. Christopher Jarzynka participated in the band, playing trombone, and Heidi O'Connell sang in the district chorus. The results of Mr. Patch's efforts are becoming apparent as the Music Department grows and progresses.

Appropriate words to describe the maintenance and cafeteria staff at Bishop Fenwick High School are dedicated and unassuming. These men and women work hard day after day to provide us with an essential service, which they perform eagerly and quietly and which we often take for granted. How often do we hear a page for Mr. Kawczynski or Mr. Keon? They are the people we call to open a locker, make a needed repair, or replace a broken fixture. Science League — Mad Scientists on the Road

The Fenwick Science League is a growing competitive team of twelve members whose common bond is a genuine interest in science and healthy competition. Fenwick is one of the twenty-two North Shore schools which meet monthly to compete in events such as the Naked Egg Drop, the Instant Invention, Physics Tricks, Bone Identification, and Metric Guesstimation. At meets there are three events in which teams of four from each school compete.

Although Mrs. Velonis and Mrs. Comeau are the moderators, the entire science faculty is supportive of the team and shares in the responsibility of preparing students for meets. Each year, the team betters its place among the competition and has high hopes to place within the top half of the competing schools. In addition to providing students the opportunity to apply their scientific knowledge, the Science League provides an opportunity for students to meet others.

Start of a New Tradition

Last spring Fenwick's first annual Science Fair opened to rave reviews due to the hard work of ninety students. With Mrs. Frances Ward providing the coordination, all Honors science students and many Level II and Level I science students entered projects in this event. Judged by Fenwick faculty and several invited judges from the scientific and industrial community, winners were chosen from ten categories covering microbiology, plants, biochemistry, biophysics, human behavior, environmental science, genetics, chemistry, and physics. Based on the students' creativity, clarity, enthusiasm, and scientific research, prizes were awarded for first, second, third, and honorable mention in each category as well as first, second and third overall.

Eight semi-finalists were chosen to represent Fenwick at the Regional Science Fair. Erika Forbes, Erin Wynne, Deborah Clark, Megan Johnson, Alyssa Riley, and Tricia Twomey participated in this event.

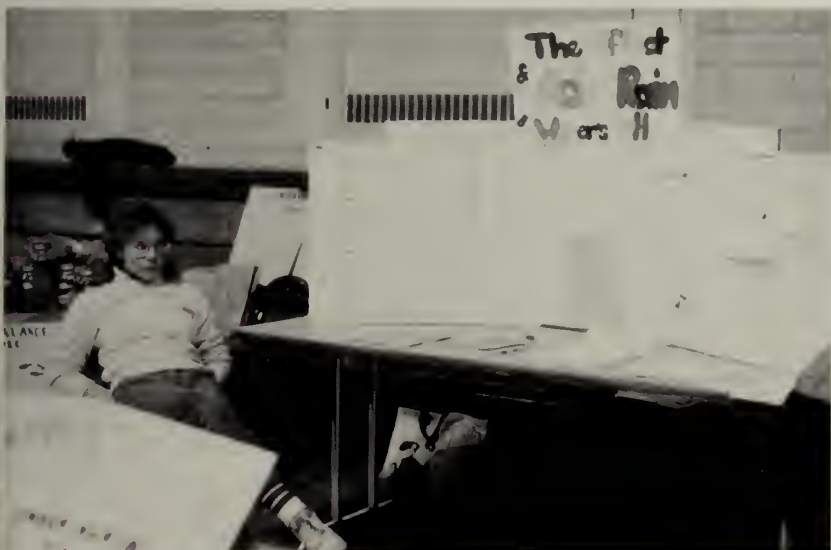

After such a successful start, everyone hopes that the Science Fair becomes an annual tradition.

A Tradition of Excellence

The National Honor Society is an organization that recognizes those students who maintain high standards and commitment to scholarship, leadership, service and character. The candidates for the NHS are first recommended for induction by their teachers. Then a faculty council reviews the candidates' records. It is necessary that the student have and maintain a 3.70 grade point average as well as show evidence of leadership, character and service to the school community.

Service to the Fenwick community is an important function of the National Honor Society. For example, the NHS runs a tutorial program for freshmen who are having academic difficulty. The members also offer their services to the school as a whole whenever there is a need. Whether it be ushering at Development Night or leading prospective students through the school on Open House Day, the members of this organization, moderated by Sr. Judith Nee, can often be found providing a needed service for Fenwick.

The Math Club — NO PUZZLES HERE

Now in its second year, the Math Club has greatly enhanced the opportunity for academic involvement in extra curricular activities for Fenwick students. The Math Club is sponsored by the American Scholastic Mathematics Association and is advised by Mrs. Marianne Russo. Students from across the country compete against one another for academic recognition based on their success in solving seven problems in a period of thirty five minutes. The test includes problems in algebra, geometry, probability, and series and sequence. The test results of the top eight Fenwick students are sent to the Association. Awards are based on the final total scores of all the competing schools and are announced in a Final Awards Newsletter.

A First-Hand Look

Last March, under the direction of Sr. Judith Nee, thirty-one present seniors spent a week in Washington, D.C. as part of the annual Close-Up Program in which Fenwick students participate. Organized by the Close-up Foundation, this event provides the opportunity for high school juniors and seniors to view the United States government firsthand through official speakers, workshops and trips to various government buildings. The students were exposed to new ideas and new people, expanding their views and their opinions. The program combined learning with fun in an effort to give students insight into the actual purpose of our government.

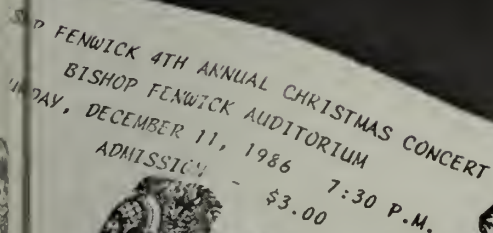

The students visited various places such as Capitol Hill, where they met with District Representative Nicholas Mavroules. They also went to the Vietnam Memorial, The Organization of the American States, and during a special visit to the Pentagon, heard speeches by representatives from the Army, Navy, Marines, and Air Force. Each day the students participated in workshops, which included lectures and debates on topics they had been discussing.

On their week long trip, Fenwick students made many friends with students from surrounding area high schools as well as from high schools in states such as Indiana and Michigan. They ended on a friendly note with a dinner that was followed by a variety show and a dance.

With the insight that they gained on this trip, many Fenwick students now have a better understanding of government functions and the importance of the role each individual plays.

Activities

Leaders of the Pack

The Student Activities Council is an essential part of the school that has proven itself useful year after year in organizing and coordinating activities that unify the student body. This year, under the new direction of Mrs. Callahan, the four branches of the Student Council put together many events that allowed the Fenwick spirit to soar. The Social Committee planned different dances including the Cotillion where students danced to the D.J.'s music and laughed with friends. The Religious Committee encouraged students to donate food for the Warwick House and visited such places as day care centers and hospitals. The Cultural Committee encouraged creative students to put together a literary magazine. And the Athletic Committee sponsored events such as a cookout before a football game and various class activities during Spirit Week. Working together under the leadership of President Katia Hale and Advisor Mrs. Callahan the Student Council members displayed their strong capabilities as leaders providing experiences that will continue to distinguish Fenwick as much more than just a high school.

Under the direction of Mr. Tierney, Athletic Committee chairpersons Antonio Craviero, Beatriz Martinez, and Jennifer Riley worked with their crew planning activities to support Fenwick's athletic program. One of the most successful events was a pre-football game Tailgate Party. One hundred students came with their friends to enjoy the barbequed hamburgers and hot dogs. The Athletic Committee was also successful in its revival of Spirit Week, organizing the Pep Rally, and popularizing Brown and Gold Day. Other activities ranged from giving flowers to team captains to planning buses for away games. The Athletic Committee of 1987 played a major role in strengthening school spirit for all sports teams.

Catch the Spirit

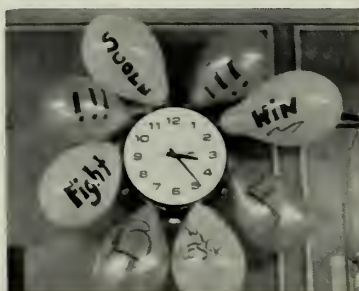

After a year of nonexistence, Bishop Fenwick's Spirit Week was back again in full swing. The week of the renowned Thanksgiving Day game against our long-time rival, the St. Mary's Spartans, fellow Crusaders let their true Fenwick spirit run wild. On the Sunday before the week began, crews from all four classes piled into the cafe to begin the decorating contest, seniors winning with their "Catch the Wave" design.

Opening with a school Mass, the week passed first to Brown and Gold Day, when Fenwick students and faculty proudly wore their school colors. Throughout the week, almost every student could be seen sporting the newly-created brown and gold stickers proclaiming the news that "Fenwick is Family." The highlight of the week was the pre-game pep rally where each of the classes created its own skit. The freshmen played a game show, the sophomores were "Spartanbusters," the juniors journeyed into the past, and seniors caught the Wave. The energetic sophomores won the honor of best skit, but by a landslide, the seniors won for the most spirit. The week ended on a successful note with Fenwick's well-earned win over the St. Mary's Spartans.

Acts of Kindness

In years past, the Bishop Fenwick Religious Committee had characteristically remained a small, close-knit group consisting of about ten people, a chairperson, and a moderator. But no more. This year, almost every Thursday after school, members from freshmen to seniors, packed Mrs. Kathleen Murdock's small office. Headed by three chairpersons — Krisan Evaul, Joseph Surette and Elizabeth Ciampa — with Mrs. Murdock as moderator, the group was rather large. However, we managed to combine the atmosphere of both social gathering, with milk, Oreos, and lots of laughs and industrious planning.

The results were activities such as visiting the North Shore Children's Hospital on Halloween and the annual Adopt-A-Child Program. Our Thanksgiving Food Drive was one of the most successful ever, and our visit to Warwick House with the canned goods, 48 frozen turkeys, and clothes donations has become a tradition of Fenwick. The staff at Warwick House sends a special thank-you each year directed to all those Fenwick students who contribute so much to the annual food drive.

Fenwick students and members of the Committee also responded to appeals to help serve food at a newly-opened soup kitchen, Haven From Hunger, situated in Peabody, so close that sometimes we walked there. The Religious Committee held Masses said by Fr. Jim and Fr. Peter, and cozy dinners. Overall, this year's Committee was a huge success, due to the many people who took the time out of their busy lives to really care about those around them.

The Fun Side of Fenwick

Outside of sports and academics, Fenwick students know how to enjoy themselves. They wouldn't have half as much fun as they do without the help of the Social Committee. This year's numerous committee members, under the direction of chairperson Melissa Roderick, have played a major role in the success of our school dances. Many hours were spent creating dance themes as well as decorations for the student dining room (otherwise known as the cafe) where the dances are held. Some of the themes of this year's entertainment included the Halloween Dance, costume required, the 50's Dance, the Polynesian Dance, the Cotillion, and of course, the Valentine Day's Dance. No school would be a complete without a social committee and Fenwick's crew has proven to be a hardworking and creative team.

Interest in the game of Chess has always been high among a certain segment of the school population. Until this year, however, students did not have an opportunity to play with one another on a regular basis. Thanks to the efforts to Marc Colcord, a junior, and Mr. Kevin MacCarthy, the Chess Club has been formed to provide members with a chance to match wits and refine skills.

Members of this club find it intellectually stimulating to play with and learn from each other. This year they have practiced weekly to prepare for team confrontations with other schools next year.

The Sound of Music

Bishop Fenwick's Music Department has continued to grow and develop in this, its fourth year. Evidence of this was seen and heard at this year's Christmas Concert which featured the faculty chorus, band, chorus and concert choir. With so many students returning to participate in the band and concert choir for a second and even third year, the performance level of both groups has greatly improved. The chorus increased in size to include seventy-five members, and the thirty-five boys who participate in chorus add a whole new dimension to the sound of the group. The Christmas Concert on December 11 was a tremendous success, as the audience, which almost filled the house, was treated to a program of traditional, contemporary and jazz-oriented music of the Yuletide season. The concert choir had another opportunity to spread the Christmas spirit into the community as they presented a program of Christmas songs and carols at three area nursing homes. This proved to be a very touching and meaningful experience for all involved.

Fenwick's musical performing groups were heard on many occasions during the school year, including the Spring Concert, the Baccalaureate Mass, the National Honor Society induction ceremonies, and the graduation ceremonies. With more performances being added each year and with the level of performance continually improving, we expect nothing but continued success for Fenwick's music program.

Take A Bow

Over the years the Drama Club has earned a reputation as a dynamic, hard-working and stimulating organization. This reputation is based primarily on the annual spring production of a musical that involves most of the school population. Students who are not part of the cast or the production and lighting crew are usually part of the enthusiastic audience. The entertaining and professional productions are the result of countless hours of preparation that begin in the fall and reach a crescendo in April.

After the great success of last year's production of My Fair Lady, Mr. Robert Sousa, director, is looking forward nervously to the reaction to this year's Hello Dolly. Based on Thornton Wilder's The Merchant of Yonkers, this musical comedy is a challenge to any high school theatre company. With the inspiration and expertise of Mr. Sousa and the guidance of Sr. Nancy, the new producer, the students will most certainly succeed in upholding the high reputation of the Drama Club.

Literary Editors Jennifer Waggett and Maura Moran.

After countless hours of layout, editing, and puzzling over pictures, the staff and editors of The Lance are preparing to meet the final deadline. This year's group of hardworking students has proven to be dedicated, spending much of its free time rushing to meet looming deadlines in order to have the yearbook ready for the Senior Banquet.

Under the direction of Editor-in-chief Amy Carlin and teacher advisors Mrs. Juffre and Mrs. Hawke, the yearbook schedule ran relatively smoothly with only a few hectic scrambles to finish work on time. Lori Soucy and Tricia Tibbets worked with their croppers and layout papers as editors of the Layout staff, designing page arrangements and choosing the best photographs for each section. Meanwhile Literary editors Jennifer Waggett and Maura Moran wrote and edited articles and devised

Nancy Ryan, editor of the Senior Section, rounded up senior pictures, quotes and baby pictures and spent many hours deciding whom to include in the special senior section. Kara Barbeau was editor of the Sports staff, making sure there was an article for each sport. Erika Forbes ran the Academics section. Krisan Evaul, Production editor, was responsible for identifying team pictures and typing copy. Meanwhile Vicki Capano and her Business staff hit the streets gathering advertisements to finance the yearbook.

So with the cooperation of these editors and their devoted staff, all the separate pieces of the 1987 Lance have been successfully put together.

On a Roll

In 1986 Scott Baldwin, former Boston State soccer player, replaced Mike Budaj as coach of the Bishop Fenwick boys' soccer team. He states, "The soccer team started out slowly with a 3-6 record at the midpoint of the season but came on strong winning the next five in a row, missing the State Tournament by two points."

The Fenwick soccer program is only three years old, and last year's team (1-10-3) graduated nine starters. This year the team improved its record primarily by using a newly-created and popular four fullback system. William Erb showed great ability at the goaltender's position. MVP Award winner Dennis Cormier played sweeper, while Sean Foley and Pat Higgins joined Bill Sayles at fullback. Sean Hallinan manned the halfback spot with Glenn Anderson, Eric Martinello and John Mahoney, who broke the record for the most goals scored. Baldwin looked for scoring from Jeff Russell, Gary Deschenes and Fred Walsh.

Outstanding players for the season were captains Jeff Russell and Pat Higgins. The Coach's Award went to Bruce Bourassa and John Mahoney. Russell and Cormier were named to the Catholic Central League All-League Team. Dennis Cormier capped an excellent season by being the first Fenwick player to be named to the All-Eastern Massachusetts Team and to the All-State Team for Division IV.

Next season the team will retain many experienced players and sees a promising future.

The Best in Their Field

1986, a season characterized by spirited play and refinement of soccer skills, started with a few heartache games that gave the girls inspiration to come back with a whirlwind to end the season. Led by captains Missy Sherriff, Katia Hale and Jen Erb, the girls played some excellent games and showed that they were a force to be respected. They were able to unseat two conference teams hoping for State Tournament berths in games against Swampscott and Bedford. Goalie Lisa McGloin and Laurie McKinnon kept up the team spirit throughout the season. At stopper, Katia Hale worked hard, as did Kelly Wolff, Heather Roberts and Missy Sherriff, who led the team in assists.

At mid-field, Roxanne Byrne and Marlene Mylinski played tough. If the ball got beyond them, the defense, led by Maryanne Gaudet, sent it upfield with help from Kathy Haviland, Kathy Mullen, Heather Roberts and Kristen Paolucci. The MVP Award was given to Missy Sheriff and Kristen Widronak who finished her high school career with fifty-nine goals and thirteen assists, for a career total of seventy-two points. The Coach's Award went to Lisa Welch and Maryanne Gaudet. Thanks to their own hard work and the direction of Coach Cunha, the Fenwick girls' soccer team had a satisfying season and should make headlines in the future.

Stepping out in Style

Through the grueling practices and the tension of meets, Coach Farley's Crusader team makes successful running look easy. The girls' team finished third in the Catholic Central League with a record of 8-3. Senior captains Tracey Clifford and Christine Murray led their team in a successful season. Christine Murray won the Team Award which recognized her efforts. The Coach's Award was given to Michelle Selburg, and the great honor of the Most Valuable Player Award recognized sophomore, Stephanie Blais' achievement of recording the ninth best time in Fenwick cross country history with a time of 17:49. Special admiration is reserved for the Freshman-Sophomore team, the League Champions.

The boys' team did just as well, finishing fourth in the Central Catholic League with a 5-4 record. Senior captain, Anthony Juliano, was given the Team Award for his "stepping out" for the team. Co-captain Scott Sirois, the "Most Valuable Player" recipient, showed his style by finishing fifth in the Division Four State Meet and by getting the third best time in Fenwick history with a time of 14:14.

A Winning Season

Despite the fact that this was a rebuilding year for the Crusaders, they managed to achieve a winning season. Coupled with a few unpredicted upsets, the Crusaders' strong record can be attributed to many key players and the determined spirit of the entire team.

Sean McMillan's strong quarterbacking and rushing abilities provided the foundation for numerous wins. This season Sean passed for well over one thousand yards. Jim Deprizito and Darren Soucy were key receivers, putting Fenwick over the line in many instances. Kevin Donnelly showed his kicking ability and gained special notice when he pulled the team through a close game against Matignon in November.

At the year-end celebration held on December 7, awards were given to the outstanding members of the Fenwick football team. The Most Valuable Player Award for offense was awarded to co-captain Sean McMillan, and a similar award for defense was given to the other co-captain, Jim Reed. Jim Deprizito was named the back MVP and Chris McHugh was named MVP for the line. In addition, Tony Cravero won the Coach's Award, Eric Klein, the Most Improved Award, and Jim LeClerc the Ralph Osgood Memorial Award.

On the whole the 1986 season was an incredibly successful one for the Crusaders with a fitting final victory over St. Mary's to end the year.

Let's Get Rowdy

Spirit, enthusiasm, energy, grace, flashing smiles and powerful voices are characteristic of Bishop Fenwick cheerleaders. They are coached by Tammy Vaughan and directed by two exceptional captains, Andrea Bettencourt and Kristen Silva. Cheers such as "Rowdy" add excitement to the games and often motivate the players to victory.

The cheerleaders work hard and enjoy themselves as well. What the fans see and hear on the sidelines and at half-time is the result of hard work and dedication. Preparing routines for the games, they practice at least twice a week, and are often at school until six in the evening. In order to encourage the players and to decorate the stadium, the cheerleaders always arrive early at home games.

Fenwick football cheerleaders are an integral part of our winning tradition. Fans and players alike hope that the cheerleaders will continue their hard work in order to support and inspire Fenwick teams of the future.

In a Field of Their Own

The Bishop Fenwick field hockey team paid the price for being a top division team last year. Because of last season's third place finish, the Crusaders were required to play the top four teams three times apiece this year as opposed to twice for each of their other opponents.

It was a rebuilding year for the young team but their record does not reflect the efforts of Coach Ellen McGrail and her senior tri-captains Betsy O'Shea, Julie Nickerson, and Karen Harney. The Coach observed that it was, "a successful season with a young team." The Crusaders finished fourth in the Greater Boston League. Rose Vitale, Michele Waterman and O'Shea were elected to the Greater Boston All Star Team. Also outstanding this season was Tricia Twomey, a junior from Peabody, who "played excellently at goalie, with five shutouts on goal," according to Coach McGrail. Other defenders who supported the team were Lori Evans, Kristen Amico, and Tricia Santry who along with Rose Vitale were elected captains for next year. Forwards Julie Nickerson, Betsy O'Shea, Tiffany Moore and Jennifer O'Keefe also had a successful season.

At the Fall Sports Banquet, Rose Vitale received the MVP Award, and the Coach's Award was presented to Julie Nickerson.

A Worthy Effort

Although this year's varsity volleyball team did not win as many games as it lost, its members never lost the Fenwick spirit of enthusiasm during the season. Coached by Mr. Anthony Juliano, Ms. Sue Bertrand, and Mrs. Carol Budaj, and led by Captains Sue Ercha, Chris Metivier and Michelle Konevich, the team made a valiant effort against exceptional opponents.

"This year's schedule was one of the toughest schedules of any team in the league," reflected Coach Juliano. "Of the nine teams we faced, six of them made the State Tournament with one of them winning the Division 2 State Championship and another ending up in the Division 1 North Finals. Two of our other opponents had records of 17-1 and 16-2."

Even while playing against these tough opponents, the girls never lost their fighting spirit. The season's highlights were two night games against Matignon and Pope John. Before packed gyms, the Fenwick team gave its adversaries a run for their money. "Both games were close matches with the outcomes in doubt right up to the final point," commented Mr. Juliano.

This season's outstanding players were honored by awards. The team's Most Valuable Players were Captains Sue Ercha, who also received the Team Award, and Sue Ciman. The Coach's Award was earned by Dora Yfantopoulos. Eva Seminatore and Lisa Boagnnam captured the JV and Freshman Awards, respectively.

The swim team had an outstanding year, finishing first in their league with a record of six wins and zero losses. The team also finished first in the Conference Meet, 110 points ahead of runner-up Notre Dame Academy.

Many outstanding performances were recorded throughout the season. Establishing new records were sophomore Lynda Lipson and senior Kristen Woods. The medley relay team comprised of Andrea Delorie, Kyle Standring, Woods and Lipson also established new league and conference meet records.

The team was helped this year by a strong freshman squad. Leading the freshmen with great performances were Amy Parco, Christina Sampsonis, and Nicole Pinto. The sophomore squad was outstanding because of first-place performers like Kyle Standring, Lynda Lipson, Andrea Delorie, Lisa Tortolano, and Leya Abernathy. Junior Kim Murtagh improved consistently throughout the season and turned in several outstanding performances. Seniors Karen Delulis, Julie Keohane and Kristen Woods provided great leadership as well as great performances.

The future of the Fenwick swim team looks promising. With two successful seasons to motivate them, the team is looking forward to a third consecutive winning season. The Fenwick swim team has certainly made a splash!

Shooting Stars

The 1987 girls' basketball team, which included four sophomores and a freshman, finished the season with a 9-9 record, merely two victories away from qualifying for the State Tournament.

The Lady Crusaders, under the guidance of Coach Mr. Mark Hillner, succeeded in upsetting undefeated Brighton High School by a score of 50-49. Earlier in the season wins over St. Mary's and Lynn English enabled the girls' to be victorious at the Christmas Tournament held at St. Mary's Lynn.

Senior captain Kristen Widronak proved to be a shooting star this year with an average of 17.5 points per game for a season total of 315. Widronak also was the leading scorer in seven of the team's nine league games.

Strong leadership was shown by seniors Missy Sherriff, Karen Delulis, and Jennifer Hagerman, who was named a student athlete representative by the Salem News.

Hillner was very pleased with the club's .500 record and he believes the Crusaders' are in good shape for next year.

Dedication to Excellence

The Fenwick Crusaders showed that they were truly dedicated to excellence in the 1986-87 season.

Pat Veilleux, who has coached the Crusaders for three years, felt that the team was young but easy to handle because of its captains: Robert Peachey, James DePrizito, and Michael Dillon.

Senior Robert Peachey played an outstanding season averaging close to twenty points and fifteen rebounds per game. On February 15, 1987, the Crusaders played St. Mary's and Peachey joined the elite 1000 club. It was no surprise when Peachey was awarded the MVP award.

James "Depo" DePrizito and Michael Dillon, both seniors, displayed their talents as guards. DePrizito's speed and agility led to his averaging about twenty points per game. Throughout the season, Michael Dillon was extremely successful in keeping the opposing teams' high scorers under control.

The Crusaders winning season was also helped by a strong bench and experienced seniors such as Paul O'Toole, James DeBenedictis, Steven Guilmette, Sean McMillan, and Keith Bloom. Newcomer Michael Cranney, who is a sophomore, also helped the Crusaders with his strong defense.

All these factors contributed to the Crusaders finishing the regular season at 12 wins and 8 losses. With this impressive record the Crusaders made it into the State Tournament.

On February 24, 1987, the Crusaders played Hamilton-Wenham in the first game of the tournament and emerged with a 79-59 victory. Coach Veilleux said, "This was definitely one of the best games of the year for us. It's been a while since there's been a meaningful game here at Fenwick."

Even with the graduation of many talented seniors, the Crusaders are in great shape with a promising JV team.

Ready for Action!

What is a cheerleader? The Random House Dictionary of the English Language provides a simple definition: "a person who leads spectators in traditional or formal cheering at an athletic contest." This description suits the Bishop Fenwick cheerleaders, but they have expanded upon it.

The objective of the hockey and basketball cheerleaders is the same, to show enthusiasm in order to inspire the fans and players. This is just the beginning of the cheerleaders' dedication to their teams.

The hockey cheerleaders, captained by Jenifer Riley and Michelle Konevich, spend countless hours preparing routines which add warmth to the otherwise cold arena. Kimberly O'Sullivan and Jennifer Withrow lead the basketball cheerleaders through routines and half-time shows which delight the spectators.

The cheerleaders' presence is also recognized many hours before the opening tap or face off. Throughout the school day, they encourage the students and faculty to attend games, decorate the players' lockers and add spirit to the halls of Bishop Fenwick. The 1987 cheerleading squads have definitely proved that they are ready for action!

Power Players

The record of the 1987 Fenwick hockey team, eight wins and twelve losses, does not reflect the effort expended by the team and its coaches. Despite tough losses suffered by the Crusaders, the team and coaches Bob Tierney, Bill Connors, and Paul Kellogg remained optimistic throughout the season. The results of this positive attitude were felt firsthand by many of the Crusaders' opponents. Due to the efforts of tri-captains James Reed, Mark Cicoria and Michael Warde, the team won four of its last five games. Also the first annual game against Peabody High School resulted in a 7-2 Crusader victory. Peter Genest completed an excellent season which included an exciting game against Salem in which he made sixteen saves in the second period.

At the annual banquet, the following players were recognized. Senior, Mark Cicoria received the MVP Award and Robert Lehman captured the Coaches' Award. Captain James Reed emerged as the team's leading scorer. Finally, the Moore Memorial Award, given to a player who has represented the program well, was presented to Michael Warde.

Great Feats on Foot

The boys' track team competed in two leagues in the 1987 season which is "very unusual in high school track" according to Coach Farley. In the Dual County League they completed the season with two wins and six losses, and they finished with four wins and two losses in the Greater Lynn League.

The highlight of the season was a victory over the arch-rival Dom Savio which was decided on the last lap of the mile relay. It was during this last event that junior Joseph Ryan beat a Savio runner by inches to win the meet.

Throughout the season other outstanding performances were given by junior Sean Dunleavy, and Bill Himaris and Takashi Kubota, who are both sophomores. With the help of the captains Anthony Juliano, Ned Martin, Shane McCarthy and David Mondt the Crusaders accomplished "Great Feats on Foot."

The girls' indoor track team finished its 1987 season with a record of 7 wins and 2 losses. The Crusaders winning season can be attributed to many factors, one of which was the excellent leadership of Coach Jack Farley and captains Carolyn Hackett, Karen Ieradi and Jennifer Smart.

Junior Shannon Fletcher contributed yet another outstanding season for the Crusaders. Fletcher placed fourth in the 300 yard run at the All-State Meet on February 19, 1987 with a time of 37.8

Sophomore Lynda Lipson broke a record in the shot put with a distance of 34' 11 3/4". The relay team consisting of Lipson, Carolyn Hackett, Elaine Veloukas, and Shannon Fletcher also had an outstanding season.

A second place finish in the Dual County League and an invitation to the Eastern States Championship Meet ended the 1987 season appropriately.

Performance Counts

The young Bishop Fenwick ski team competed at Bradford Hill for the fourth year in a row. The girls finished with a 3-5 record, while the boys had a 2-6 record. This season was challenging for the sixty members of the team who found it frustrating to cope with many cancellations due to the overabundance of snow. Without a coach, the captains of the girls team, Tiffany Moore and Natalie Kassaraba, and the co-captains of the boys team, Michael Brogna and Patrick Hayes, worked extra hard and assumed a great deal of responsibility.

The team shows promise for next year with some talented underclassmen prospects. Freshman, Shannon Geaney competed in the M.I.A.A. games as well as in the Baystate Games. She came in sixth in the overall league standings. The Fenwick ski team looks forward to a new coach and a new start next winter.

When I first came to Fenwick, like all my fellow freshman I had no idea of what lay ahead. The teachers who were to dedicate their time and effort to my learning, the classmates who were to become my special friends, the opportunities that were to open themselves up to me . . . I did not realize that Fenwick was to give me all this and so much more. The magic of how smoothly all aspects of Fenwick fit together amazes me still.

As editor of the yearbook I had to face the challenge of putting all the pieces of Fenwick together. Little by little the many different parts began to fall into place and four years of our school developed into a unified picture. As the staff worked I began to see all that had really taken place since that first day freshman year.

It was not something that I could explain in simple language to anyone who was not part of it all, but is my sincere hope that this yearbook does explain — in special terms so that only we who had experienced the joys, the laughter, the occasional sadness and especially the friendships — could understand. We tried to capture the faculty, the leaders, the friends, in pictures and words that might trigger memories long after we have left.

Our goal was to make you see how it all took place, how it all fit in. All who worked unsparingly on this book have gained insight and better understand the magic that has occurred over the past four years. It is my expectation that through our efforts you too will better realize it and will hold it forever in your hearts together with your special copy of Putting It Together.
